Key Skills:

- Management skills: As a campaign manager you will formulate marketing plans and collaborate with the internal team and/or external agencies to deliver them. Campaign managers need to guide their team and establish campaign parameters and delegate effectively.
- Communication skills: Excellent writing skills are a prerequisite as you will frequently write copy for marketing promotions. Campaign managers also need pristine presentation and communication skills. They need to manage relationships with internal collaborators (including management, commercial, technical, operational team mates), agencies and third parties. The ability to express the importance of the campaign, the vision and goals is often as important as the content of the campaign itself.
- Project management skills: As a campaign manager you will need to work with a budget, meet deadlines for multiple projects and ensure ROI on marketing campaigns. You will need to manage the organisation's output effectively and intervene if things are going off-track.
- Numerical skills: An additional factor favoured, campaign managers need to be good with words and numbers. You will need to acquire data and use it to target selected groups, as well as analyse the success or otherwise of campaigns.
